Mary Maclaren was a princess that knew from the moment that she was born that she was destined to lead the clans.

She learned how to be a leader among her people. She thought that one day the crown would be hers, but her father had other ideas. His desire for what was right for his people out weighed his love for his daughter. It was agreed upon that she would become the wife of Conner and the clan Patrick. She was not very happy about this arrangement, but there was really nothing that she could do.

On her way to become part of the Patrick Clan, she is abducted by a rival Clan. She is to be taken back and ransomed to her father for the highest amount that they can possibly get. During their journey, her abductor Cameron begins to have feelings that go beyond just any kind of friendship.

He soon finds that his feelings are not one sided. How can he possibly give her up to his brother, when she has captured his heart?
