Stolen for the Alien Lottery

Jeri is a big beautiful woman who is tired of men. She's tired of her life and all their excuses, lies and commitment problems. After visiting a cranky old shrink, she determines that she doesn't want to change—she just wants a superior man, if she's ever going to satisfy her biological clock and need for out of this world romance. She gets her wish when she wins the alien impregnation lottery. She is chosen by a superior species to bear a child. However, this space visitor is unwholesomely attracted to his test subject. The very thought of making love in the physical way is at both shocking and strangely arousing. Will she surrender her morals and submit to this alien impregnation? More importantly, just how big is he and can she possibly take one for science?

Abducted by the Alien Alpha

Nelly is a big beautiful woman who has a problem saying “yes” to everyone she meets. She is constantly being guilted into going to events she doesn't want to go to, blind dates she doesn't enjoy, and a job she that only brings her unhappiness. She determines that it's time to start saying no! No to whomever approaches her, asks her a favor or starts making strange requests.

Ironically, that's when she is approached by a handsome stranger who seems to have big ideas for the future. She says no to him too, but he won't seem to take the hint. He's an alpha male who seems determined to have her follow him on a new adventure.

Imagine Nelly's surprise when the stranger provides proof that he really is an alien and that she has won the alien lottery, guaranteeing one baby for a random earth girl by a team of alien breeders. Nelly is intrigued at the idea, but insists that if she “won” then she gets to choose who the lucky one is.
