A short story so exciting, this description can't tell all the details!

Madeline James is as patriotic as the next young lawyer. Busy as she is preparing for her first trial, she's willing to attend her employer's rooftop Independence Day picnic.

Anthony is a special guest of the firm, invited to represent Discovery Manor, a client that specializes in unusual training for lawyers.

Madeline is shocked when Anthony expects her to demonstrate some of her specialized classroom skills in public. But Anthony offers an unexpected remote-control incentive for her compliance.

Will Madeline go public in her pursuit of Fourth of July fireworks?

This book is intended for adult readers who enjoy honest stories about consenting adults (especially if that means explicit content and graphic language!) Part of a twelve-book series, this short story can be read entirely on its own.
